

SHOUT ABOUT YOUR VOLUNTEERING

Hi, I'm Eileen and I volunteer in Morden Library giving to the community by helping visitors access the public computers and assisting them to find the information they require.

In addition to this I search for books that are required by other London libraries and label them up for the courier service.

I do it because public libraries are a very important facility and it is essential that they remain available to Merton residents in all parts of the borough.

What I enjoy most is ensuring that the books are in the right place on the shelves so that customers can find them easily.

The biggest challenge I've faced was learning the Dewey numbering system which is used to identify the section on the shelf to which a non-fiction book belongs.

As well as of personal benefit, volunteers benefit visitors to the Library by ensuring help is available to those that need assistance.
